Prompt: It was a dooms day and there was only one person behind all that

Story: . That person was a man named Daija. He was the only that had the power to stop the destruction that was going to happen. But he had no one to help him, so instead he decided to destroy the world. He had no choice, but to do it. However, he didn't want to get caught by the police, so he created a fake accident in which he and his wife were killed. The police found no evidence or bodies, so they believed that Daija and his wife were killed in the accident.

In the last few days, a woman named Yuri and her younger brother, Yuta, were in a plane crash, after which Yuri had a strange dream. Right after that, a massive earthquake occurred in Japan. Yuta was separated from Yuri, who was close to death after the accident. She was rescued by a police officer, and soon after, Yuto was found in a flooded underground area by a police officer, who was following up on the mysterious earthquake.

Yuto was rescued and brought to the hospital, where he is reunited with his sister and quickly diagnosed by a doctor. Yuri is then visited by a man named Daija, who claims to be Yuto's uncle and asks for his help in stopping the impending disaster. After he discovers that this "uncle" is actually Daija, Yuri rejects Daija's offer of help.

The next day, Yuri and Yuto discovered that something is wrong with Yuri, who believes that she has been affected by the earthquake. Yuto then notices that his hands have changed color, but is too late to warn Yuri.

Daija then appears at the hospital, claiming to be Yuto's

Prompt: 3 people walked into a strange island where they encounter a new type of scary tribe

STORY:

. After the tribe kills a member of their group, the remaining survivors confront the tribe's leader, Red John. The tribe was created by Red John, to be a new family, and the members are called "Johns" after him.

A police psychologist, Dr. Spencer Reid, is transferred to the department's Behavioral Analysis Unit, or BAU, after being unable to solve the memory disorder of serial killer "Red John". The unit is overseen by Unit Chief Alexandra "Alex" Lester, and consists of analysts Kate Moretti, Reid, and anthropologist John Carroll.

It is discovered that "Red John" was never actually convicted. His DNA does not match that found at the crime scenes and he does not have a criminal record, despite having confessed to his crimes, but his face and fingerprints were never recorded. Further investigation reveals that he is a John, a type of serial killer who has a "shadow" that mimics his crimes, and was recruited into the BAU by Alex. Through surveillance, the BAU learns that "Red John" is a former U.S. Army colonel, Robert "Red" Johnstone, who killed his entire family and kidnapped several victims, including Reid's mother.

As "Red John" begins killing members of the BAU, they realize that the "shadow" is actually a hallucination sent by Red John to drive them mad. They discover that Johnstone had a traumatic experience as a child involving a bear that traumatized him and he developed the "shadow" after a bear appeared in his house. Reid, who is the only one who remembers Johnstone's past, realizes that he was traumatized by his mother yelling at him because of the bear. He has hallucinations of the bear

Prompt: it is the 50th century where the world is blind but 2 kids were both who could see the light

Story: one of the boy was named Clarice and the other was named Ren. They were separated at birth and Clarice lived with his foster mother and had a happy life with his adoptive father. After Clarice turned 13, he met a mysterious girl named Alice who told him that he was a "Hundred" which means that he was the one who could see the light and was a harbinger of destruction. Alice told him he had to kill Clarice, the harbinger of destruction, or he would cause the end of the world.

Shortly after this encounter, Clarice was taken from his home by a group of government agents, who told him that he was targeted as a "Hundred" for his ability. Clarice was taken to a facility outside Denver and was trained by a mysterious organization. After months of training, Clarice was broken and injected with a drug that rendered him catatonic.

Ren, still unaware of his true identity, was sent to the facility upon his discovery that he could see the light too. Ren found Clarice catatonic in the middle of a training course and attempted to help him. After a violent confrontation with the facility's head trainer, he was moved to an isolation cell, where he discovered that Clarice had cut out his own catheter, and had been repeatedly drinking his urine.

Ren attempted to escape the facility, but was found by a government agent and brought back. Ren was then confronted by Clarice, who had been awakened by the presence of another "Hundred" and had broken free of his isolation cell. Clarice attacked and killed the agent, then escaped with Ren.

They were soon pursued by the facility's head trainer and his henchmen, but Clar

2.story- mess. The only problem was that she was not very easy to find. She was quite shy and she had no friends. She lived in a dark corner of her home, in a room that was not easy to find. I was looking for mutants and this was my chance, the perfect opportunity to bring my career to a new level. I had to catch her and bring her to my laboratory so i could dissect her and finally understand what made her so different. She was different, but i did not at first see how. She was not a mutant, not at first sight. She was a goblin, a tiny and hairy little thing, with a flat nose and a bright little smile. I was not an expert in such things, but she looked like one to me. I had to find out what she was. No goblin had ever been seen before and that made her valuable. I had to catch her. She was fast, i could not keep up with her. She was hiding in the most unlikely places, slipping under the floorboards, climbing behind the walls. I found her eventually, in a tiny little room that was so hard to find i was sure she had been placed in there by her own volition. I did not waste time. I
